

The 2015 Bevan Prize for Health and Wellbeing

The Judges

David Brindle is public services editor at the Guardian. He has been the paper's social affairs correspondent and edited the Society section. He has won awards for his coverage of social services, disability and nursing and was awarded the Social Care Association's merit award in 2007. Previously, he worked as the labour correspondent of the Financial Times after beginning his career at the Coventry Evening Telegraph. He chairs NDTi, a not-for-profit social change organisation, and sits on the board of Richmond Fellowship, a mental health service charity, and chairs its 2Care subsidiary.

Baroness Finlay of Llandaff is a crossbench Member of the House of Lords, chair of the Palliative Care Strategy Implementation Board for Wales and President of the British Medical Association. A past president of the Royal Society of Medicine, Baroness Finlay is also professor of palliative medicine at Cardiff University School of Medicine and a consultant of palliative medicine at Velindre Cancer Centre.

Jaselle Williams is a trustee of the Bevan Foundation and is currently honorary Secretary of the Aneurin Bevan Society.